

EATING OUT WITH WHEELS

A guide to wheelchair accessible eateries in country Victoria

Preface

In 2000 I realised there was a significant gap in publications available to help people with special needs and the elderly who require the use of an electric or manual wheelchair when considering eating out in restaurants in Melbourne, so I carried out research and wrote "Eating Out with Wheels - Melbourne CBD" 2000 edition. I subsequently updated it in 2002. Recently it occurred to me that Wheelchair bound people may be interested in visiting provincial cities and towns throughout Victoria and would have to wonder about accessibility to cafes, restaurants and bistros. Accordingly, I decided to undertake research and write this access guide titled "Eating Out with Wheels - Victorian Country Cities & towns" 2012 edition.

I am well-qualified to write this Guide as I eat out on a regular basis throughout the warmer months of the year and I am an electric wheelchair user.

Unlike the 2000 edition, not only do I visit but I have actually dined in each establishment, so I can give a genuine opinion of the food quality, value for money and service provision, as well as electric wheelchair access.

Almost all the journeys were made on V/Line Velocity diesel cars, which are very comfortable. Each V/Line train carries an onboard ramp, although I found the doorways from the platform into the carriages a little narrow.

Be aware most eateries have conventional swing doors, so you might have to ask your carer or a local resident to hold it open for you. Interestingly, I've never had a problem with this because country folk are very helpful and happily make time — maybe because they don't live in the rat-race of a major city eg Melbourne. I found throughout my research the footpath gutters were very good and presented no problem.

The criteria used in this Guide:

- 1 Eatery front entrance must be accessible for an electric wheelchair
- 2 The Victorian city or town must be accessible by a V/Line train, preferably a Velocity diesel car
- 3 Country cities or towns must be within a day trip (this includes travel to and return journey) from Melbourne
- 4 The service provision must be at least very good, preferably excellent
- 5 Each of the eateries are open for a weekday lunch meal

Note: The term 'eateries' includes cafes, hotel bistros and restaurants.

As a somewhat self-confessed food critic & writer, on the one hand I've tried to be fair to eatery owners and chefs, on the other hand I've been honest in my palette's evaluation of the food quality served.

Be aware that if calling any of the phone numbers throughout this guide from interstate, the prefix 03 will be required.

In conclusion, I have really enjoyed this exercise. I like travelling and have found the project a great challenge. I truly hope that you find this Guide useful and that it might encourage you to venture to Victorian cities and towns, knowing that you will not have a problem finding an accessible eatery.

Edition History

1st Edition - Jan 01, 2013

The 1st edition was compiled over 18 months & encompassed 93 eateries and was published on January 01, 2013.

2nd Edition - Jul 01, 2013

The 2nd edition was the first update of the guide and I focussed on eateries in mainly in Ballarat but also visited Bendigo on 3 occasions. This edition proved to me that it's all very nice writing such a guide but that it would require six monthly updates due to eateries closing down or changing management the latter of which often means changing eatery name, cuisine, hours of business etc., so in short I've begun a lifelong mission as a community service to people with disabilities & the elderly. This 2nd edition encompasses 103 eateries - 10 more than the 1st edition.

3rd Edition - Jan 01, 2014

The 3rd edition focusses on eateries in Geelong now including cafés. Also a new feature has been incorporated to show when I last visited each eatery with either a 1st visit or a most recent date being shown. The 3rd edition encompasses 109 eateries - 6 more than the 2nd edition, but be aware 2 eateries have closed down.

4th Edition - Jul 01, 2014

The 4th edition focusses mainly on Traralgon & Morwell eateries although it also includes a few additional as well as updated reviews of Geelong eateries. The graphic star rating system has been replaced by highlighted words and for 5 star eateries the words "5 stars" has also been bolded emphasising the best in eateries in my guide for food quality & service provision. The 4th edition encompasses 119 eateries - 10 more than the 3rd edition

5th Edition - Jul 01, 2015

The 5th edition revisits the northern cities of Bendigo, Castlemaine, Kyneton & Woodend. Yet again I found quite a few changes in eateries changing name & cuisine as well as discovering more eateries in Bendigo, Castlemaine & Kyneton. This edition also introduces a new feature documenting if an eatery is vegetarian friendly and if so how many menu items are vegetarian. The 5th edition encompasses 137 eateries - 18 more than the 4th edition
